DOCTORAL PROGRAMS

PhD Creative Writing and Literature

This program addresses the critical and professional study of creative writing and literature, recognizing their complexity and relevance in academic and professional contexts. Designed specifically for distance learning, with a fully synchronous approach, the program explores in depth creative writing practices, advanced research processes, and the ethical dilemmas that arise in this field. Through workshops, seminars, and practical courses, a wide range of written forms is analyzed, from prose and poetry to genres that challenge convention and seek innovation. In addition, the program's focus centers on the intersection between writing and community, the application of unconventional editing methods, aesthetic experimentation, and the importance of ethics at every step of the creative process. Physically and symbolically situated in the vibrant urban environment of Santurce, the program offers a stimulating setting for intellectual exploration and creative collaboration.
